Salvation is from sin, and the physical body is not sinful; rather, as Paul affirmed, all God made, including physical bodies, is still good (literally beneficial). The Body of our resurrection is far more glorious than a replacement body for each individual. Such individualism as taught in biological resurrection is not taught in scripture.

Overview. This comprehensive study of Paul's language of "the body" knits together all of his great themes: the body of sin and death, in which man has fallen; the body of Christ on the cross, through which we are saved; Christ's body, the Church; and the resurrection of the body. Nearly all of the main tenets of the Christian faith are represented here—the doctrines of man, sin, the incarnation and atonement, the church, the sacraments, sanctification, and eschatology.

His proper teaching of the body terms of the Greek used by Paul, and used in the OT, show that a Biblical understanding of what "flesh" means irradicates the possibility of a sin nature. "Flesh" and "mortal bodies" in the NT is essentially the whole person as related to the physical world in the realm of human possibility (Max King providing that latter idea).

Body, Old Testament.The doctrine of creation sets forth the essential corporeality of human existence. When God created Adam and Eve, he provided them with physical bodies ( Genesis 2:7 Genesis 2:22).The fact that God formed the physical body first and then breathed into it the breath of life means that we are living bodies, not simply incarnated souls.

This study assessed personal attitudes and perceptions of societal attitudes toward condom carriers, with a focus on the role of gender. Although prior research suggests that sexually active women in society are looked down upon, there has been little investigation as to whether this view remains pertinent today, and whether this remains the case at the individual—as opposed to societal—level.
